Graber Farms

Graber Farms is located in New Haven, Indiana, just east of Fort Wayne. The Farm is owned and operated by the Graber family, who have two generations of family members involved in the day to day farm operation. In their farming, the Grabers stress a "focus on the land", which they feel allows them to consistently offer the highest quality of produce in both their retail and wholesale operations. The Graber family prides themselves on being part of the community, and part of their commitment to this has resulted in the successful use of CSA

(Community Supported Agriculture). This arrangement allows for people within the community to pre-purchase produce for the upcoming season, helping to defray the costs of farming, as well as ensure the best in quality, and first pick, of produce for the community. The Graber's 150 acre certified organic farm produces from June, through October, and offers everything from strawberries and watermelon, to peppers and squash.
